

Press Release - SLA Inspiration Award Shortlist 2017

2017 sees a wonderful selection of inspiring school libraries to reach the shortlist of the SLA Inspiration Award. This year we received the greatest number of nominations for both the primary and secondary categories of the SLA Inspiration Award. After much discussion, these were whittled down to six longlisted secondary schools and four longlisted primary schools. Visits took place with two judges attending each school. Then, apart from one school library which was so new that not every aspect had been completed and students had not yet begun to use the facility, so it was recommended that the school reapply with impact data for the next year's award, an unprecedented full house of school libraries progressed to the shortlisted stage. It was simply impossible to discount any of these inspirational school libraries from a list to recommend to other schools.

The primary schools are all state primaries managing to find innovative ways to fund great designs to ensure their children experience an immersive reading culture in school. From a woodland themed first school library at Charford, to mural covered walls at Adderley and a big red double decker bus in the playground at New Milton, all offer a unique approach to providing their pupils with books to start the reading habit.

The secondary schools have invested heavily in their school libraries. All have devoted a great deal of time and money to their school library designs, and continue to do so with their professionally qualified school librarians running these great facilities. Each school has invested in what is right for them, and all their applications have lived up to the reality we saw on our visits.
