Bring Fun to Reading: how libraries can help families get switched on to reading

This Unconference will seek to inspire attendees, share knowledge, raise debate, and provide networking opportunities

The project found that parents: "reading to children is a decisive way to ignite their interest in reading for pleasure, that a child's independent reading thrives alongside being read to, and that free choice of reading material is a critical element in engaging children and encouraging their reading for pleasure" Egmont/Foyles Print Matters More research and extension findings 2018

2.00pm – 4.30pm, Friday June 29th

Vernon Castle Room, Millennium Library, The Forum, Millennium Plain, Norwich NR2 1TF

With Special Guests:

Jon Biddle Jon Biddle has been a teacher for the past twenty years, and has a passion for getting all children reading. He coordinates the national Patron of Reading initiative, and has presented at conferences organised by UKLA, the School Library Association, and Book Trust. He has recently been awarded 'experienced teacher of the year' in the Egmont Reading for Pleasure Teacher Awards, in association with the OU and UKLA.

Paeony Lewis Paeony lives in Norwich and is an established children's author with picture books and early fiction published in sixteen countries, in thirteen languages. She enjoys visiting schools and libraries. www.paeonylewis.com
