

Reflect

Reflecting - celebrating your work as well as being self critical—are important skills that will help you to continue improving. Fill in the boxes below.

What went well with your research?

What are you most proud of about it?

What could have gone better?

What new fact or skill did you learn from this project?

Name:

Class/Form:

Connect

What things might be related?

What are the things you already know about to do with your topic?

Write down three questions that you want to find the answers to and what the next step will be. Be specific!

Questions:

Wonder

Next Step:

Investigate

You should be using at least 4 different sources.

- Blogs
- Previous learning
- Encyclopaedias
- Winston Churchill Archive
- Carel Press
- People
- Journals
- Textbooks
- Google Scholar
- Videos
- Newspapers
- Eclipse
- Paid online resources

Other resources

Stripling's model of Enquiry (Stripling, Barbara K. "Inquiry-based Learning." In Curriculum Connections through the Library, edited by Barbara K. Stripling and Sandra Hughes-Hassell, 3-39. Libraries Unlimited, 2003.) This booklet © Alison Tarrant. For more resources on Inquiry based learning: <https://fossil.org.uk/>

Investigate

It is really important that you reference all your resources to show where you got your information and in case you need to find them again! The Evaluation score is how reliable and trustworthy you think it is

Book title:

Author:

Publisher:

Date:

Evaluation score: /10

Title of digital resource:

Author:

URL:

Date last updated:

Evaluation score: /10

Title:

Author:

URL:

Date last updated:

Evaluation score: /10

Title:

Author:

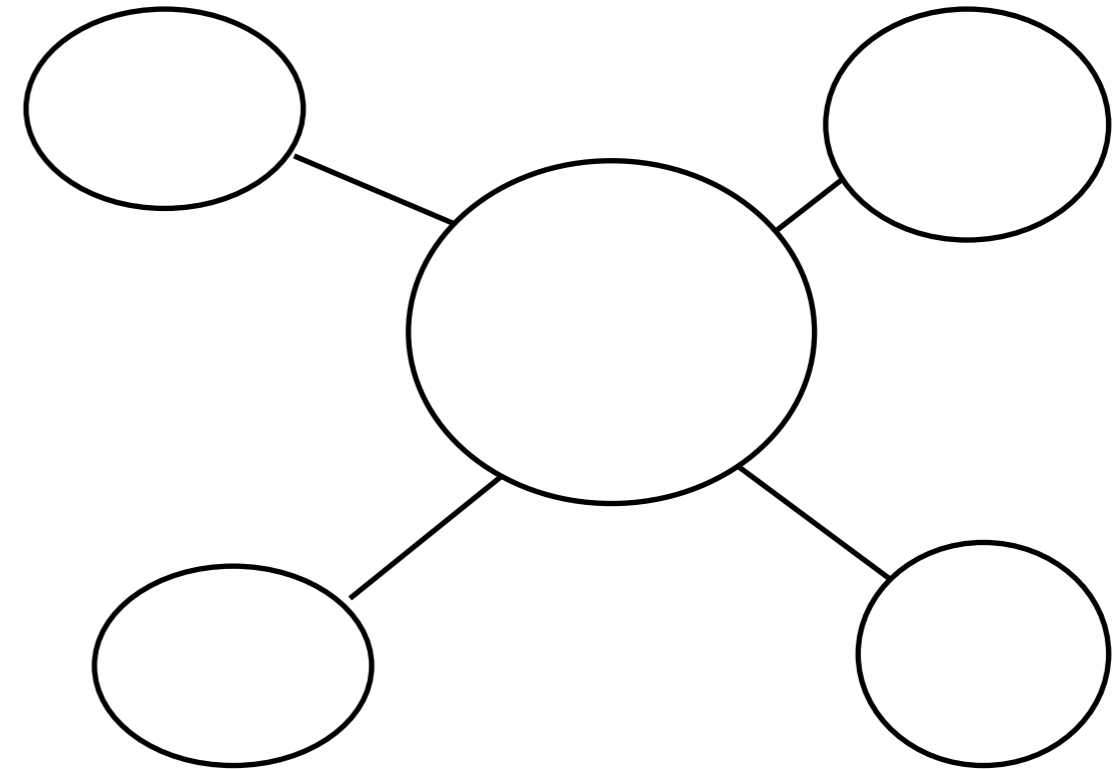

URL:

Date last updated:

Evaluation score: /10

Construct

Use this blank spider diagram to plan your argument. Your topic goes in the boxes and your key points go round the outside, so each outside bubble is a paragraph. Include a reminder about your evidence. This will help you stay on track when writing your essay.

Express

Research is a conversation—you have read other people’s thoughts, opinions and evidence and used them to come up with your opinion and a contribution to the conversation. It’s important you show who’s work you used.

For more help with referencing and some examples see the powerpoint.

Book
 “Title”, Author. Publisher, Date. Pages used.

Pictures
 Name of picture, Artist’s name (Date). URL Date accessed.

Journal or Magazine article
 “Title of article”. Author, Year, Title of magazine, Volume, Issue number. Page range.

Website
 “Heading of webpage”, Author or organisation. Name of website, Date last updated. Heading of paragraph used (with URL in brackets).